5. I have been informed, and I believe, that this article has been cited as prior art against claims of the above-identified application.

6. Pilar Lorenzo and I, together, conceived of, and originated, the work described in the Lorenzo et al. reference.

7. Peter Neame was an Associate Professor at the University of Tampa, not under my supervision, at the time during which the work disclosed in the Lorenzo et al. reference was performed. Peter Neame acted as a service provider. He obtained the amino acid sequencing of a peptide from CILP, which was used to corroborate the nucleic acid sequence of the gene. The contribution of Peter Neame was not an inventive contribution, but merely technical assistance using protein sequencing techniques well known and widely practiced in the art.

8. Yngve Sommarin was a lecturer at the University of Lund at the time during which the work disclosed in the Lorenzo et al. reference was performed. Yngve Sommarin acted under my direct supervision at this time, and assisted in generating cDNA clones. Yngve Sommarin also provided advice on technical issues in the cloning of CILP. The advice did not rise to the level of an inventive contribution.

9. Peter Neame and Yngve Sommarin did not make an inventive contribution to the subject matter claimed in claims 1, 3-6, 18, and/or 36-56 of the above-identified application.
